

FARM in a POT- Growing edibles in containers

with Susan B. Viemeister

Thursday, May 3rd

10 a.m.- 1:30 p.m.

Many vegetables and just about any herb can be grown in containers. This is a great way to bring your harvest up on your deck and away from the marauding and ever-hungry deer and yet closer to your kitchen . Growing in containers is easier on the gardener's back, and provides the optimum soil conditions for the plants. Edibles in containers are a unique décor for the garden. Shrubs such as blueberries and other fruiting perennials can provide structural interest to the garden or deck. Come learn the best techniques for planting , then get your hands dirty and plant a container that you will take home for your garden.

Cost of soil, planter, and four plants are included in the price of workshop.

Additional plants- vegetables, herbs and annuals - will be available for sale.

Please dress appropriately for outdoor activities and bring your favorite clippers and gloves.

Catered Lunch is included in the fee.

Fee: $75
